Struck on a broad flan with an almost complete die impression; an impressive and rare specimen. This rupee dates to the year immediately preceding Ghulam Qadir's occupation of Delhi. The following year, 1202 AH (1788 CE), was marked by severe political instability within the Mughal Empire. On 27 Shawwal 1202 AH, the Rohilla chieftain Ghulam Qadir deposed and blinded Emperor Shah Alam II, subsequently installing Bedar Bakht as a puppet ruler. After a brief but tumultuous interlude, Shah Alam II was restored to the throne. In the aftermath of these events, the imperial coinage underwent a significant modification: the earlier couplet Sayah Fazl-e-Ilah, which had been in use since Shah Alam II's coronation, was replaced with a new couplet incorporating the epithet Sahib-i-Qirani. This revised formula continued to appear on the coinage until the end of his reign.
